Presented by:

In this fun, highly visual and interactive workshop, teacher-librarian and author Mike McQueen takes youth and school librarians on a 2-part journey. In the morning, program participants examine the challenges and opportunities presented by struggling readers and what librarians can do to support their achievement. In the afternoon, attendees will examine the eBook industry, the impact of mobile devices, and how social networking can play a big role in a child's learning process as well as in professional practice.

Mike McQueen taught sixth grade for 4 years before he worked as a librarian. After working for six years as an elementary librarian, he made the switch to the high school level and is currently in his 4th year as the teacher-librarian of McLain Community HS, an alternative high school for at-risk students.
